

For Immediate Release

Free Green Building Open Day in Bristol on 13 November

Need advice on your green building projects? The Green Register is pleased to announce a FREE green building event for members of the public, taking place at The Create Centre on the 13th November between 11am and 3pm (advance booking advisable but not essential).

The event will provide free advice for anyone who is planning a refurbishment project or with an interest in greener building practices.

This is a unique chance to meet Green Register members and gain practical advice from the experts on a range of cutting-edge techniques including energy saving, using natural materials, installing renewable energy technologies and water saving systems.

Lucy Pedler, TGR's founder, director and head trainer, said:

"I've been working in the field of sustainable construction for over 25 years and I set up TGR in 2000 to provide a network and training resource to professionals who want to learn more about green building techniques and share their knowledge and experience with one another."

She continued:

"We're giving our Green Register members attending the event the chance to meet with Bristol residents who are interested in finding out more about green building or who might already have a project in mind. Visitors to the event will be able to quiz our industry experts about different green building concepts and techniques and gain practical advice that they can use in their home."

With the government's Feed-in Tariffs having been introduced this year and homeowners realising that they can save money as well as reduce their carbon footprint by building sustainably, TGR's members will be on hand to advise on many aspects of green living so don't miss out.

To book your advice slot please contact mail@greenregister.org.uk or for more details see the website at www.greenregister.org.uk

This event is run in conjunction with the Create Eco Home and the 'Make Your Home an Ecohome' and Green Doors initiatives.
